The other issue which caused the the mediation was the insistent demand of the United States on two essential points—the character of the man to succeed Huerta and the manner in which this new provisional president shall take office.

The American Government de mands unqualifiedly that an out and out Constitutionalist be named as temporary president. Likewise it objects to having Huerta literally name Mexican constitution, by permitting to appoint as foreign minister the man who would, under the constituion, succeed him. This objection even though Huerta should agree to name Carransa himself.

The American Government's main raild the concessions and contracts he has entered into-concessions and contracts the Constitutionalists will be sure to declare vold as soon as they are in the saddle.

The American Government is most insistent that a recognised Constitutionalist shall be Provisional Prestuntil the strongest, faction-the Constitutionalists are in absolute control. The alternative, it is believed, will be a rebel march upon Mexico City and the attack upon Zacatecas indicates that the rebels are planning this move already.

For that reason the American delegates demand that such things as fruerta's dignity shall not be considered and that some method of representation the government shall be sanizing the government shall be adopted that will please the Carrannistas. It can be stated upon authorlity of Secretary Bryan that at no

EMBARGO ON ARMS RENEWED BY BRYAN;

WASHINGTON, June 11. - The American embargo against the shipment of arms to either the Federals or Constitutionalists in Mexico was whn Bern resumed to-day. Secretary Bryan ofscially declared that all customs officials throughout the United States SPIRITIST SWINDLERS clearance papers to any ship which with war munitions.

This order followed the information that the El Sud, at Galveston, would try to put to me with ammunition ended for the rebels at Tampico and trans-ship the ammunition at sea to a vessel headed for that port.

Renewed military operations by the newed military operations by the Constitutionalists in their campaign toward Mexico City aroused keen interest here to-day. Second Autopsy Shows That Miss Winter Did Not Die of Drowning.

WITNESS DISAPPEARS.

Police Search for Man Who Is Said to Have Been at Boathouse.

BALTIMORE, June 11 .- With uspicion of poison, county police officers to-day switched their inquiry into the mysterious death of Miss Ella G. Winter. Miss Winter's body was found last Monday in Curtis Bay, not far from the houseboat of D. Meredith Reese jr., whose guest she had been the previous Thursday on a motor boat ride. She was not seen after Thursday at 9 P. M. until found dead.

That Miss Winter was seen on the opposite side of Curtis Bay Thursday night is a story being investigated. Her hat, found yesterday afternoon ended what promised to be a solutio of the mystery. The chemists' examination for poison will take a week

The police are hunting a negro said to have gone to the Reese housebont late Thursday and then to have disappeared. He may be able to explain Miss Winter's supposed presence at Riehl's shore, to which point she could have gone only by boat. The second autopsy has definitely settled the fact that Miss Winter did not die by drowning. State's-Attorney Green of Anne Arundel is directing the inquiry.

Reese to-day denied a report that the girl fell from his motor boat

The court force dragged Kelly to the staturs, where the beggar got Harvey's hand in his mouth and lacerated it badly. They took him back to the courtroom, where the second sentence was imposed.

Kelly immediately began a foul-mouthed tirade against Magistrate Corrigan and tried to jump across a table at him. Flaunery and Lee caught him and the three roiled to the floor in a hiting, tearing mass. Magistrate Corrigan rose in the excitement and yelled to the officers:
